Program Description:

The Foster Grandparent program recruits low income seniors as volunteer tutors and mentors for children who have special needs. The Foster Grandparents work in supervised settings, which include schools, community organizations, and faith-based organizations. The one-on-one mentoring programs are for preschool, elementary, middle, and high school students. There are many benefits for the volunteers, including a tax-exempt stipend if they income qualify, transportation assistance, an annual physical, a script-save card, a daily meal, recognition, and social events. Volunteers are supervised by professional staff and are supported by the Foster Grandparent Program. Foster Grandparents also become linked to a network of additional support, services, and activities. The greatest reward Foster Grandparents claim is a worthwhile reason to get out of bed in the morning, and the love and respect they receive from the children. Foster Grandparents are expected to make a nine month to one year commitment, which involves 15 to 20 hours per week during morning, afternoon, or evening hours.
